Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

The readers of this column will no doubt do some thinking of their own when they finish reading this account of the torpeoding of the ship (name censored) on which Eugene Tucker returned to this country from Cape Town, Africa, to a port on the Atlantic coast in his own country. Too many people, Tucker states, fail to realize that we are at death grips with bitter enemies of democracy. He hopes this narrative of his own experience will help Nevada City folk and Americans in general to wake up.

"We were mentally set for the explosion when it came at 12:45 p. m. a week ago last Sunday when we were only about a day's run from our home port. I think it was only an accident that the sub poked its peroscope out of the water when it was only about 200 yards away. Usually, I am told, they stay away much farther and let go with their tin fish. They're extremely leary of an armed ship. And ours carried guns in the stern.

"The torpedoe hit squarely amidships under the bridge and the explosion ripped up everything from keel to deck. Some of the women screamed and some of the little children began to cry, but there was no panic. The reason for this was that we had lived with the idea of being hit by a torpedo any minute for almost a month. We left Cape Town on March 1, or at least boarded the ship that date, and we were torpedoed on March 29.

"We had been drilled practically every day. Rough as the water was, women and children and other passengers had climbed into the boats, the davits were swung out, the boat falls loosed and they were actually lowered part way down to the water. Every passenger even the youngsters knew exactly what to do, which boat to go to, and what to keep handy, such as life preservers of cork and balsa wood, a coat and a hat.

"When the first torpedo hit, the motor boat which carried besides the usual food and drink, a short wave radio sending set, was blown into the water. There were six life boats but only four of these were finally available. My life boat was the first launched successfully. It was in charge of the first officer. He brought the boat around to ship's stern. Then the sub, which had moved astern sent another torpedo crashing into the ship. It must have passed right under us. This second explosion blew us right out of our boat and it upset. There was a life raft nearby and we managed to make that. Our life preservers came in mighty handy.

"Later one of the four boats afloat picked us up. We also took off all those that were drifting around on the rafts. These rafts are so arranged that when the ship is hit they can be slipped overboard easily, or when the ship sinks they are free to float. The submarine never surfaced. I am told that after they are sure they have made a killing they always make off. They are deadly scared of desroyers and take no chances of encountering one. It was while I was on the raft, that I saw its peroscope.

"The gun crew began shooting the moment the sub's peroscope was sighted and continued to shoot until the ship settled and their gun mountings were awash. I think most of the gun crew, navy boys, were saved. Well we drifted around for a while with the hope of picking up everyone in the water. In fact we did, everyone who was alive. We were in the Gulf stream and drifted with it in a northerly direction, probably 75 or 100 miles. On Monday morning we were sighted by a patrol flying boat belonging to the navy. It came down close and signaled us. A few hours later a destroyer

OMAHA GIRL WILL MARRY JOE SWAZEY

Miss Janet Thompson of Omaha, Nebraska, has written to The Nugget announcing her engagement to Joseph (Sierra Joe) Swazey, who enlisted for army service from this city.

The bride to be is a graduate of the Omaha University, where she was a member of the Sigma Chi Omicron Sorority.

Shortly after the arrival here of the letter from Miss Thompson, a communication was received from Swazey.

"I am announcing my engagement to a very beautiful and talented young lady," Swazey writes. "She is a song writer also and we have written several songs together. They are soon to be published."

Swazey says the marriage will take place at the end of the war and the couple will live in Nevada County or in French Corral, where Swazey was born.

Joe is stationed at Fort Knox, Kentucky.

FREE BOOKLET TO AID VICTORY GARDENERS

"The Home Vegetable Garden" is the title of an excellent booklet, which L. G. Lageson, Agricultural Commissioner of this county, now has at his office in the court house for distribution to those interested in planting Victory gardens this spring. The booklet is issued by the College of Agriculture of the University of California. It gives a list of the best varieties of vegetables to plant for early or late harvest, the best methods of planting, the care needed, and also describes the insect pests and the way of dealing with them.

The new officers assume their positions immediately.

ORLANDO McCRANEY CAREER HAS BEEN ADVENTUROUS ONE

"An Adventurous Career" is the heading o a feature story appearing in the Sacramento Bee about Orlando McCraney, well known resident of this city.

The feature article follows:

The office which brings together the small manufacturer or industrialist and the government agencies requiring enormous supplies of defense materials is the contract distribution division of the War Production Board. Throughout the entire nation the board has set up these offices in the strategic centers of industrial areas.

The purpose of the offices is twofold. They speed the production of vital defense materials and save the small manufacturer, industrialist or machine shop operator from closing his plant because emergency priorities prevent the production of his normal products.

The Sacramento district office in the Farmers and Mechanics Building is a typical unit in the nationwide program. Since the office was established here three months ago, it is estimated that contracts worth more than $4,000,000 have been placed in this area.

At the head of the office is Orlando McCraney of Nevada City, Nevada County, a mining engineer and former resident of Sacramento, who took over the position two months ago.

McCraney's career has been an adventurous one. For the last four years he was chief engineer of a gold mine operated by the Pan Philippines Corporation on Lahuy Island in the Philippines. He was palnning to return to his position there by clipper plane last December 22nd but canceled his plans with the outbreak of the war. A month later he accepted the position as manager of the contract distribution office here.

A son of the late H. A. McCraney, who founded the Oak Park Ledger and died in 1934, McCraney was born in Dubuque, Iowa, on November 8, 1881. When he was 4 years old, his father, who published a weekly newspaper in Dubuque moved the McCraney family to Lake County, where he edited the Lake County Avalanche.

Young McCraney attended Lake County schools until 1894 when his father became a clerk of the supreme court in Sacramento and brought his family here. In Sacramento the boy attended the Sutter and Sacramento Grammar Schools and graduated from the old high school at Ninth and Capitol Avenue. There were twelve graduates in his class, he recalls.

In 1905 McCraney graduated from the mining college at the University of California and began his professional career in the mines of California and Nevada.

Since 1912 he has been associated with many of the largest mining ventures in the West, including the Tonopah Development Company and the White Caps Mining Company in Nevada, the Eagle Shawmut mine in Tuolumne County, and the Murchie, Regan, Canada Hill and other mines in the Nevada City-Grass Valley area.

Four years ago he accepted the position in the mine in the Philippines.

"The Philippines have a wealth of raw materials," he pointed out. "The metal and gold production exceeds that of California and half of this comes from two mines.

"As far as I know, the mine on Lahuy Island has been destroyed. I talked with one of the mine operators by telephone since the invastion of the Japanese and although he could not say much because of military censorship, he did tell me "everything is fine." By that I surmise he meant they had been successful in destroying the mine and equipment."

McCraney married Amy Landsborough of Florin, a daughter of the late L. M. Landsborough.

The McCraneys have four children: Thomas, an attorney in Los Angeles; David, a mining engineer student at Stanford University; James, a student in aeronautical engineering at the University of Caliornia, and Mrs. William Polkinghorn of Berkeley. The McCraney home is in Nevada City. In Sacramento McCraney lives at 1700 O Street.

NATIONAL FOREST AREAS WILL REMAIN OPEN TO PUBLIC USE

"To help build the mental and physical strength of our citizens and war workers for days of crisis and emergency, the national forests of the California Region will remain open this summer to public use, insofar as fire prevention and military needs permit."

This statement by Regional Forester S. B. Show of the United States Forest Service spikes rumors no one will be allowed in national forest areas for the duration of the war.

However, Regional Forester Show points out certain restrictions limiting the public use of all national forests will be necessary. "The forest service," he said, "has a grave responsibility to protect normal and war time public interests in national forest resources and the lifelines of industry and communication running through these forests. But I beileve if the public will give us wholehearted cooperation in meeting these obligations, we will be able to keep open sufficient recreation areas to supply all war time needs.

"Our sole purpose in placing limited restrictions on national forest use is to provide greater control for fire prevention and forest and watershed protection in the front line forests of the western combat zone."

In northern California, the Sequoia, Sierra, Inyo, Stanislaus, El Dorado, Mono, Tahoe, Plumas, Lassen, Modoc, Shasta, Klamath, Trinity and Mendocino National Forests will remain open, except for federal forest areas where lumber companies are operating, and inaccessible regions of strategic watersheds and high-value timber or grazing lands, where fire hazard is severe.

Limited areas in national forests will be closed for military reasons and abnormal or very severe fire conditions might necessitate additional closures in hazardous regions.

Boundaries of all closures within national forest areas will be clearly marked and publicly announced by the forest service as far in advance as possible before their effective date.

All closures, except those made for military reasons, will be removed as soon as the fire season ends. While restrictions are in effect, detailed maps and information on closures will be made available to the public at forest supervisors headquarters and ranger stations.

The forest service also is requesting the cooperation of private land owners within and adjacent to national forests in closing their forest areas when necessary to the public and military interest.

MARJORIE TAYLOR WEDS ARMY OFFICER IN LAS VEGAS

Marjorie Ruth Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross F. Taylor of Downieville, became the bride on April 9th of William N. Van Alfen of Salt Lake City.

The couple will live in San Bernardino. Van Alfen is staff sergeant at the Victorville Air Depot.

The wedding was performed in Las Vegas by President Bunker of the Mormon Church. Bunker is a brother of the junior senator from Nevada. The parents of the bride and Ross L. Taylor, uncle of the bride, were present for the ceremony.

The former Miss Taylor is well known in Sierra and Nevada Counties. She attended Downieville schools and completed her education in Los Angeles.

CEMENT POURING STARTS

The pouring of the cement for the foundations at Nevada City's new postoffice building at Commercial and Main Streets started today.

R. Perrott of Oakland, who is erecting the building at a cost of $18,000 was here Saturday to inspect the progress on the building.

Baguio Residents Are Unreported

Rev. Charles F. Washburn, former Episcopal minister of this city, communicated with Francis B. Sayre, United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands, inquiring about Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Kneebone and their daughter, who have been unreported since the war started.

The Kneebones are former residents of this county. Mrs. Kneebone is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Washburn.

"I do not find the names of Mr. and Mrs. Kneebone or their daughter in the list of persons interned in Manila at Santo Tomas University", Commissioner Sayre replied to Washburn. "I have had no accurate information regarding conditions in Baguio as communications from that point have been cut off since December. However, I have received indirect information which leads me to believe that conditions there are fairly normal and that Americans in that district are not being maltreated."

In addition to the Kneebones, there are others from Nevada County who were in Baguio at the outbreak of the war.

Rev. Washburn is now priest in charge of St. John's Episcopal Church in Corona. The former local minister lives at Willmarlloyd Grove, Arlington. He writes motion pictures he had taken while in this vicinity were viewed with interest by convalescing navy men at the Corona Navy Hospital, where he showed them recently.

Precinct Confines

All those residing west of the Nevada County Narrow Gauge, Sacramento street, and of Main street, vote at the city hall tomorrow. All east of those boundaries vote at E. J. N. Ott's assay office on Main street.

The polls will open at eight o'clock in the morning and close at 6 in the evening.

Caught in the Riffles

FROM A REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK: District Attorney Vernon Stoll is back at his desk in the courthouse after an attack of the measles . . . They are paying $15.30 per day at the cantonment but it takes a magician to cut away the red tape to get a job, apparently. . . Assemblyman "Scoop" Thurman expects opposition for his position in the August primary election. . . Dick Hoskins of Grass Valley reportedly will make formal announcement of his candidacy for sheriff shortly. . . Dr. W. W. Reed will probably be the first physician in the county to be called into military service. Believe it or not, Dr. Reed is the only unmarried physician in Nevada County.

The innocent inquiry of a local resident to a soldier as to where he was stationed brought this neat reply:

"Zip a lip and save a ship! There may be a Mata Hari in the crowd!"

Tom Curry and Steve Matteoda befriended an apparently down and outer. He was a stranger in town, a fellow that looked like he was badly in need of a meal. Curry and Matteoda fed him and then took him to their room to spend the night.

Next morning when Curry and Matteoda awoke the stranger was gone. Also absent were approximately $20 in cash, other articles and Matteoda's $65 watch!

WHERE'S FATIMA?

Remember Fatima?

As the trade-mark of a brand of cigarets, Fatima was one of the first famous creations of systematic advertising. Every smoker of Fatima's day was familiar with the package bearing the picture of the Oriental dancing girl. Slick-dressed "drummers" in peg-top trousers cracked snappy jokes about Fatima. So did vaudeville and medicine show comedians.

Came World War I. Shortages loomed; prices rose. The war market was a sellers' market. So the manufacturers of Fatima cigarettes cut out advertising. So did some 18 or 20 other national concerns, and many lesser concerns—all businesses built by long-term advertising.

Most of those concerns are long since dead—dead with Fatima, and for the same cause. In the resurgence of post-war buying, Fatima's brand was forgotten. Shrewd rival tobacco men had used the lean war years to build up goodwill for new trade-marks and brands. Those brands are leading sellers and leading advertisers, in the cigarette field to this day.

Apparently many business men, small and large, local and national, remember Fatima today.

An auto manufacturer advertises proudly that he is now making tanks exclusively for Uncle Sam —and will resume making cars better than ever when the war is over. He remembers Fatima!

A local tire and battery dealer uses his advertising space not to increase sales for that is impossible—but to give his customers sincere advice on making their tires and batteries last longer. He remembers Fatima!

To paraphrase an advertising slogan of today, you can't do this year's business on last year's advertising if you expect to be in business next year. Fatima tried that!

THE MacARTHUR OF THE ASSEMBLY LINE

Henry Ford is a very old man. He will be 80 his next birthday.

Last year Uncle Sam gave him the job of building bombers.

Ford began work on 1000 acres of Michigan brush land. On it he built a steel and concrete factory so big that errands are run in standard-size automobiles.

Aircraft companies generally had used rubber dies to stamp out light metal—dies that wore out quickly. Ford made steel dies.

Plane builders had long been handicapped by flimsy jigs, constantly needing rechecking. Ford's new jigs are 20 tons of hard steel.

Ford has fashioned machines high as a two-story house. Automatic lathes and drills and reamers work on steel with the dexterity of human fingers.

Today, 12 months from the time he began clearing the brush for his factory, Ford's plant is prepared to turn out a four-motored long range, heavy bomber every two hours, day and night—the sort of bomber that can fly under its own power to any war zone on this 25,000-mile globe! In the next twelve months, Ford can make more heavy bombers than exist in the world today!

Other auto manufacturers have also performed marvels in turning to plane production and tank production. But somehow Henry Ford, the oldest of them, the greatest— the industrialist who so hates war that he refused to make war planes until convinced America was in danger—holds the mastery as he goes into the final years of his life.

A rugged individualist from boyhood, Henry Ford has made strong enemies as well as friends. But today, in his way, he is serving his country as effectively, if not as specatcularly as the fighting men who man the bombers he turns out. The flivver king of yesteryear is the MacArthur of the assembly line.

GROUNDING THE DEATH DRIVER

Should the rubber shortage become so acute that all pleasure motoring were banned, there would be one silver streak in the dark cloud of transportation curtailment —the grounding of that deadly American phenomenon, the death driver.

A recent safety study shows that more Americans have been killed by automobiles than by all hostile armies in all wars since Lexington! Since 1923, more than 500,000 highway accident deaths have been recorded—more than twice the 240,000 killed in the Revolutionary War, War of 1812, Mexican War, Indian Wars, Civil War, World War, I, and this war to date!

The highway destroyer of life and property is as dangerous as a deliberate saboteur. He should be grounded for the duration whenever his irresponsible tendencies are discovered.

ANTELOPE HUNTING SEASON

Preliminary applications for antelope permits are now available. Captain Alfred Willard of the Division of Fish and Game, with headquarters in Loomis has a supply of the permits.

These permits must be filed with the Division of Fish and Game on or before midnight, April 20, 1942.

Local hunters have signified their intention of joining this unusual hunt, since this is the first time the season has been opened on antelope in portions of Modoc and Lassen counties.

The instruction to applicants is as follows:

Section 1346 of the Fish and Game code pertaining to the issuance of permits to take 500 male antelope provides that, in the event more than 500 applications are filed with the Fish and Game commission, a drawing will be held to determine by lot who shall receive the permits.

It appears that more than 500 applications will be filed, this enclosed form must be completed and filed with the Division of Fish and Game prior to midnight, April 20, 1942, if you desire to have your name included in the list of those from which selection will be made.

Now that shavers will be limited to one razor blade per week, that sterling patriot Zadok Dumbkoff, regrets that he has but one beard to grow for his country.

Meanwhile, Grandpappy Jenkins isn't worried. He says he'll manage to scrape through somehow.

SPRING FLIGHT

came along and picked us up.

"There was a doctor aboard and he took care of those who were hurt, or who had suffered from exposure. The rest of us were put to bed. All were given dry clothing, and those who were not much the worse for the experience got hot coffee and a little later, hot soup. The destroyer landed us the next morning. But talk about rough riding, I hope never to have to travel on a destroyer again. Those babies pay no attention to wind or waves. They plow along in a direct line. Sometimes they lay right over on their sides and, at others, stand on end. Everything is pretty crowded on a destroyer. The bunks are narrow and one just has to be an acrobat to keep from being rolled out of them. There are three bunks in a tier and the top and middle ones are meaner to get into than mounting bucking bronco. But we were almighty glad to be taken aboard.

"There were about 45 passengers aboard our ship when we sailed from Cape Town, and the crew numbered about 90. We had a big cargo picked up on the east African coast somewhere. Thirty two persons lost their lives. Some of them, members of the engine crew were killed when the first torpedo smashed, some died when the second one hit, and some were drowned. When we were landed we were taken in charge by the Red Cross. Some went to local hotels for a night and those that needed further care were hospitalized. The Navy and the Red Cross took care of us until we were able to go on our own again. I was one of the lucky ones that needed little care."

DRUNK DRIVING AT NEW PEAK

SACRAMENTO, Apr. 13.—(UP)—War prosperity, war psychology, and heavy population increases were held today by the state motor department to be the contributing factors involved in the increase of drunken driving throughout the state.

The gain of this type of offense in January was reported to be 86% over Janury, 1941. Estimates indicated exceptionally heavy increases for February and March as well. Heavy increases in liquor tax revenue gave evidence of increased consumption.

The department is invoking the law making mandatory revocation of driving licenses of any one convicted of drunken driving three or more times.

YES, INDEED, your refrigerator has important work to carry on today. Food vital to your health and your family's health is to a large degree perishable food that must be kept under dependable refrigeration.

Your Government specifies that good health requires a daily diet of six essential foods. These foods are dairy products, eggs, fruits, vegetables and cereals. Five of these foods need constant refrigeration to prevent loss of vitamin content and to prevent spoilage and waste.

If you now have a refrigerator that automatically keeps temperatures below 40 degrees—be sure you keep that refrigerator in fighting trim. Handle that refrigerator with care. Keep it in good repair. You are helping win the war when you save food and protect health with adequate, modern refrigeration.

RACKETEERS GET SETBACK FROM SUPREME COURT

By RALPH H. TAYLOR

The California State Supreme Court, in a series of decisions of fundamental and far-reaching consequence, has written a new and brilliant chapter in labor relations jurisprudence during recent weeks.

It is a chapter which should go far in eliminating strike practices that were an affront to law and order and which actually amounted to gangsterism, conducted under the cloak of picketing.

Some weeks ago, in this column, attention was called to the high court's decision that mass picketing, where such mass picketing causes persons to fear bodily harm, is in violation of the law. Of such mass picketing, the court said: "It is forceful intimidation and constitutes violence." The decision was rendered in a case involving the Yuba County anti-picketing ordinance.

Even more sweeping is the court's recent decision in an injunction suit by the Elm Oil Company of Long Beach against the CIO Oil Workers International Union, Local No. 128.

In this case, the court held:

1—That physical injury is not essential to constitute violence in connection with picketing; that threats and initimidation will suffice.

2 That a blanket injunction prohibiting picketing in any form may lawfully be issued, where picketing is accompanied by such violence.

The Supreme Court's majority opinion in this case contained this basic declaration:

"The constitutional guaranty of freedom of speech extends no further than to confer upon workmen the right to publicize the facts of an industrial controversy by peaceful and truthful means.

"Labor has no sanctuary in any federal right when it departs from the bounds of peaceful persuasion and resorts to acts of violence, physical intimidation or false statements. Under such circumstances, picketing loses its character as an appeal to reason and becomes a weapon of illegal coercion."

The court then proceeded to hold that where picketing is "thoroughly enmeshed" with violence all futufe picketing in any form can be lawfully enjoined.

Noting that no physical injury was involved in the case at issue, the court held, however, that the intimidation consisted mainly of following or shadowing customers and employees of the company and wives of the employees. This, the court ruled, amounted to physical intimidation because "the threat of violence is implicit in such shadowing."

Such shadowing, threats and vile language, declared the court's opinion, were "thoroughly enmeshed" with the picketing, and the action of the lower court in issuing an injunction prohibiting the picketing was therefore upheld.

Farmers, who have sometimes wondered during labor disputes whether there was one law in this country for labor, and another for the public at large will welcome the Supreme Courts decisions as new proof that no group, no matter how powerful it may be, can flaunt the law without eventually being called to account for its transgressions.

It is particularly fortunate that the high court's decisions should be handed down at this time, for this is a period not only when it is imperative that we have labor peace and uninterrupted production, but it is a period too, when it is doubly important that we should scrupulously maintain at home the democratic principles for which we are fighting abroad.

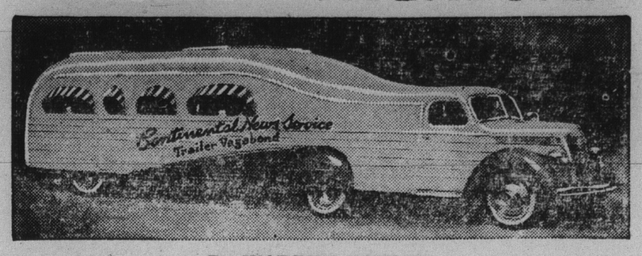
TRAILER VAGABOND



By WARREN BAYLEY

This feature appears through the courtesy of O. K. Tire Weld Co. G. R. (Red) Jarrard, Hills Flat, Grass Valley, California.

This is the home of Evangeline, immortalized by Longfellow, and the heroine of one of the great romances of all time.

Evangeline, as you remember, was one of the Arcadians banished from Nova Scotia by the English in the year 1755. The entire population of Arcadia was herded aboard boats and deported to America. Families were broken up, parents and children separated, and sewet hearts parted. The Arcadians were scattered far and wide, many of them never to meet again. Some went to New England, others to New York, and others farther south, all seeking a place to live in peace and contentment.

Some ten years later the first of these refugees arrived here in Southern Lauisiana. The rich soil and pleasant climate were the answer to their search. They settled down along the rivers and bayous of a large region with the largest contingent here at St. Martinville. Others came as soon as word of the new Eden spread to the Atlantic coast. According to historians, only 4000 reached Louisiana but today their descendants have multiplied until over 300.000 reside in this one section of the state alone.

Longfellow was deeply impressed by the story of the exile and his writings aroused great sympathy for the Arcadians His poem "Evangeline" was based on the life of one of the refugees, Emmeline Labiche, who was separated from her lover. Research has proved that Emmeline actually lived and that the real name of her sweetheart (in the poem Gabriel) was Louis Arcenaux.

In Longfellow's poem Gabriel was faithful to the last. Unfortunately the facts do not agree with this account. After despairing of finding Evangeline, Gabriel philosophically decided to make the best of matters and married another. After many years of search Evangeline finally came to St. Martinville and found Gabriel. History has recorded their meeting. It is said that when Evangeline ran to her lover, he hung his head and said. "Emmeline my dear, I am unworhy of your love. I have pledged my affections to another. Please forgive—and forget."

If the above sounds a bit dramatic, please remember that in those days that was the manner of speech of a man to a maid. If the meeting were recorded as of today it would probabl read like this. "Sorry Babe, I didn't think you'd make it, so I jumped the broomstick with another gal."

Today Evangeline's grave beside a church here in St Martinville, has become a shrine. It is marked with a life-sized bronze statue given to the Evangeline Memorial Ass'n. by Dolores del Rio, who played the title role in the picture "Evangeline" made in this section a few years ago.

The home of Gabriel has also been restored, inside and out, to resemble as nearly as possible its original appearance. Its interior has been converted into a museum with exhibits designed to show the furniture, the clothing and implements of the early settlers.

Near Evangeline's grave stands the same ancient, moss-hung oak, under which the lovers met after years of separation.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

RUMMAGING through my desk the other day, I came across some snapshots of friends of mine made back in 1933.

If you don't think time flies . . . if you don't think this world ever changes . . . you ought to look at the women's hats and dresses in those pictures taken 9 years ago! Wow!

It gave me quite a start . . . and then it set me to thinking . . . and rememberin'! Lots of things sure happened in 1933. A new administration in Washington . . . the turning point of the depression . . . and the coming of Repeal.

I remember the re-legalization of beer. It came before Repeal, when Congress amended the old Volstead Act to allow legal sale of "3.2" beer.

What talk and arguments they had in those days! One argument I remember well . . . was that beer would do a lot to help bring back prosperity. I wondered at the time whether that argument could be proved.

I thought about that again, the other day. I decided to check up and find out.

Well, I found out plenty. I found out that legal beer has paid more than 3 billion dollars in taxes since 1933. It has made more than a million new jobs.

According to one of the reports I've seen, beer has put more than 15 billion dollars into general business circulation. Goodness me, that's a lot of money.

Beer is sold today in every state in the Union. Every state benefits from beer's jobs and taxes. And I guess there's no denying that beer did do its share in bringing back better times.

I'm glad it did, too, because beer is such a pleasant, appetizing beverage. And it stands for moderation and moderate people . . . it's not likely to get you in trouble.

HAM 'N' EGGERS AT IT AGAIN

By CLEM WHITAKER

Preliminary skirmishing has broken out in the 1942 "Battle of Ham and Eggs," with sponsors of the twice defeated pension scheme intensfying their drive to qualify the revamped proposal for a place on the November ballot, and with California realtors firing the first public blasts in opposition.

Mass meetings have been staged in several principal cities by the pension promoters, avowedly to commemmorate the alliance between organized labor and the Ham and Eggers, but behind the scenes there has been considerable muttering in the pension camp that labor cooperation has been lukewarm and ineffective.

Attendance at the pension meetings has thus far fallen sharply below the big attendance records set up in 1938 and 1939, when the movement claimed more than a million followers, but speakers at the meetings have now started to turn on the pressure for campaign funds to build the organization back to some semblance of its former strength.

No steps have been taken as yet to organize a formal campaign against the "funny money" program, and probably will not be taken until it is known whether sufficient signtures have been obtained to force the measure to a new vote. Both the San Frncisco Real Estate Board and the California Real Estate Association, however, have adopted resolutions vigorously condemning the so-called "Payroll Guarantee Amendment."

The realtor resolutions, in addition to blasting the revised pension plan as a scheme which would "destroy the state's credit and place an intolerable burden on its taxpayers" also charge that enactment of the program at this time would seriously jeopardize California's war production effort, declaring: "This proposal, if placed in operation, would put a premium on indolence and shiftlessness at a time when the nation is striving for all out war production. This is due particularly to the provision that the state shall pay a pension of not less than $20 per week to every qualified elector 50 years of age or over with an income of less than $2400 a year and willing to forego any productive work."

The realtors likewise voiced a scathing attack on provisions of the new pension bill which would give unemployed junior electors, 21 years of age or over, "a pension exceeding the amount paid to enlisted and drafted men in the armed forces of our country, who are risking their lives in defense of this nation."

More than 200,000 signatures of registered voters must be obtained to initiative petitions if the new Ham and Eggs proposal is to have a place on this year's ballot. Sponsors of the plan, at recent meetings, have claimed that 135,000 signatures have already been obtained in Los Angeles County, but have indicated that the petition drive in other areas has lagged and that work must be intensified during the next 60 days.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder at the power of dreams
To shape the thoughts and deeds of men,
And lead them when their tasks have failed,
To hope and plan and build again.
And mid the discord and the strife,
Though black the skies and wild the sea,
To vision even through their tears,
The better world that is to be.

I wonder if you have begun to dream of a post war world and to envision it as you hope it may be after the holocaust of unleashed fury has died away. Of course we must first win the war before we can build for peace—everyone tells us that and in order to win the war as speedily as possible we must think war, talk war and wage war, there is no other way. Still it is not too early to begin to fashion in our minds the better world of truth, justice and honor, wherein all the nations of the earth can enjoy their inherent rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Many writers and public speakers seem deeply concerned about the status of American morale. I think this unnecessary. Americans have inherited much of that sturdy pioneer spirit, which, when confronted by difficult and dangerous tasks, takes for its motto the words, "nothing too much," and goes to work with a will. Perhaps the worrying persons to whom I allude have taken too much of their own medicine—played too many enervating games of hop-scotch, tag and ring-around-the-rosy. The average American needs no such childish tonics for the building of morale. He recognizes the utter ruthlessness of his enemies and the fact that his beloved country is in jeopardy spurs him on. If his morale sags—if it ever does, he considers General MacArthur and remembers Pearl Harbor.

Loyal Americans who have allowed their minds to grow up, may, for the time being, put aside childish things for the purpose of aiding the war effort by every means at their command. They think war, talk war and wage war, not because they like to, but because that is the only way by which final and permanent victory may be attained.

We, the people, have lost many illusions since the present war began, perhaps we shall lose many others; we have no time for wishful thinking, no time for unnecessary diversions, but we still may treasure our ideals and dream our dreams of that world of peace and justice which must be evolved from the cruel frenzy of the present.

A dream must go forth and conquer before the task is begun and who knows in whose heart may lie the perfect pattern of the better world to be?

MY PLATFORM

IF ELECTED TO THE CITY COUNCIL—

To give my city the best administration within my ability without increasing the present tax rate

To see to it, so far as my vote counts, that Nevada City continues to be a place where the fathers and mothers can rear their children in an environment of decency, good schools and civic cleanliness.

To examine carefully all city expenses with the view to making every dollar of tax money buy a dollar's worth of goods or services for the city.

To give constant support to all city improvements, including those for the streets and for Pioneers Park, as money from tax receipts is available, with due regard to keeping a reserve fund to the city's credit in event of any emergency which may arise in these war times.

In short—to do for the city what any citizen of common honesty, decency and prudence, owning his own home, would try to do for himself and his family

For after all the City of Nevada is only a larger home for all of us and our children
